Mosquitos kill more every year than all other creatures combined. What if we could just get rid of this deadly killer all together? Scientists around the world are putting systems into place that could kill off whole populations of mosquitos to combat the ever-growing number of human deaths. If successful it would result in the biggest planned extinction in human history. This two-hour film dives head first into the battle of man vs. mosquito. Who can predict what will happen when we play God?